THEY CALL THIS "A ZOOLOGICAL RIDE"

At first glance one might think too much cheese for supper had caused a bad attack of nightmare, but a close scrutiny reveals the apparition as members of the British Division Guards putting on a full dress rehearsal for the Aldershot Tattoo. Dressed as bears, apes, tigers and leopards, these members of the crack regiment are performing one of the final acts in the Zoological Ride that promises to be the eighth equestrian wonder of the world. The Aldershot Tattoo takes place in England from June 26 to July 1 and is one of the great annual Army displays which attracts hundreds of thousands of spectators.

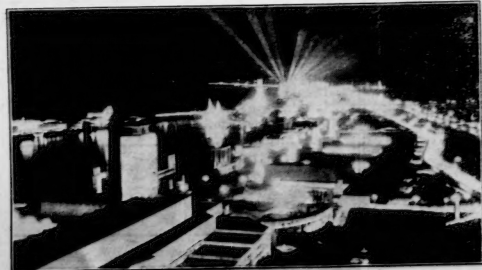

BRITAIN SUGGESTS INDIAN MAHARAJAH SHOULD TAKE LONG HOLIDAY

Apparently Great Britain did not approve of the manner in which His Highness the Maharajah of Alwar, Simla, was running his state. It is reported he was given the alternative of taking two years' holiday or of accepting the appointment of a commission to control affairs at Alwar. The famous sportsman and wealthy ruler of 25,000 people preferred a holiday and has left for his summer palace at Rajpootana. Later he will proceed on a long tour of Europe and possibly the United States. Our pictures show a close-up of the Maharajah. While the main photograph shows a gathering at a bathing tank behind the City Palace at Alwar on the occasion of the occasion of the (Shangre) religious festival.

THE NEWEST ADDITION TO CANADA'S CHAIN OF NATIONAL PLAYGROUNDS

This map shows the location of Riding Mountain National Park, the newest of Canada's national playgrounds, which will be officially opened on July 26. Situated on the lofty plateau that forms the long summit of the Riding Mountain, this attractive reservation of 1,148 square miles is covered with forest growth and dotted with numerous lakes. Within its boundaries roam moose, deer and bear, while in a fenced enclosure near Lake Assiniboia is a small herd of buffalo. This park also contains one of the largest remaining herds of wild elk or wapiti in Canada, numbering between two and three thousand. The location of the park is ideal owing to its accessibility.

SKY-RIDE VIEW OF THE WORLD'S FAIR AT NIGHT

GLIMPSES OF MAX BAER IN TRAINING FOR THE SCHMELING BATTLE

This drawing was made from sketches at Atlantic City, where Max Baer trained for his fight with the German champion, Max Schmeling, early this month. It represents accurately this fighter's most characteristic ring poses, expressions and blows. He defeated Schmeling by a technical knockout.

BAER SCORES TECHNICAL K.O. OVER SCHMELING

By Edward J. Neil

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, June 9.—A roaring, retaking, punching young demon from California, leaping Max Baer, came out of the West with a charge of another Jack Dempsey Thursday night to snatch down Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion of the world, in ten breath-taking rounds before a thunderstruck crowd of 65,000.

From the state that sent Dempsey himself east and Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries before him, the curly-headed fighter of Livermore came to outclass the dogged Schmeling from the start, smash him groggy in the ninth, then come back with such savagery as the ring hasn't seen since the departure of the old Manassas Mauler, to crush the Teuton in the tenth.

It was one of the greatest upsets the modern ring has seen as Schmeling, favorite as high as four to one before the battle started, never had a chance once the opening bell on Dempsey's first big promotional venture sounded.

The stout, crushing right-hand punches that knocked out Johnny Risko, Mickey Walker and Young Stribling bounced off Baer's wide-eyelid countenance as though the German were punching a brick wall. And in turn the long-armed Californian, punching short and with the power of a five-inch shell in his right hand, battered the German's head about as he pleased.

Baer Enjoys Self

Through the first three rounds the huge Baer, with 15½ pounds of weight in his favor, inches in height and reach, tossed Schmeling around the ring, whipping left hooks to the body, hurting him right to the head, laughing at the German's chances, apparently enjoying himself immensely.

Baer seemed to hide his time until the ninth, when he caught Schmeling full on the side of the head with one of the terrific ring crosses that had been shaking the German from the first punch on. Casually the tremendously muscled Baer moved in and piled Schmeling again. As Schmeling, swelling about the eyes, fell into the ropes, Baer seemed to sense that the end of the battle was near. He tore in, caught the stoic Teuton in a corner and whaled away with both hands.

The annal sounded. Baer kept on punching, and as Schmeling tottered a bit as he started for his corner, he waved a befuddled protest to Referee Arthur Donovan.

Fury of Dempsey

Too badly hurt to recover in the short minute's rest between the ninth and tenth, Schmeling shuffled out for the tenth, a mark for the terrific blows Baer loosed with a fury the ring hasn't seen since the night Dempsey battered Luis Firpo into oblivion in the Polo Grounds.

Teeth bared in a snarl, body hunched over and swaying to give momentum to each punch, the curly-headed Californian smashed Schmeling's head with one terrific whallo after another. The crowd, rearing the birth of a new punching monarch in all the heavyweights, screamed as Schmeling tottered. The German's defense slowly sank, his knees bent and Baer hamed into him with one final crushing right to the jaw.

Schmeling went to the floor in a sprawl and the rearing of the crowd was so great that Referee Donovan could only read the knockdown time-keeper's lips as he told off the seconds.

Somewhat, Schmeling, eyes glazed and sightless, arms helpless at his side, raised himself to his feet at the count of nine. Baer stormed in upon him again, his shots thudding into Schmeling's helpless body. There was but one volley, and Referee Donovan stepped between them, catching the German as he slipped down in a neutral corner, just one minute and fifty-one seconds after the start of the tenth.

Courageous Battle

Schmeling fought a courageous battle from the start, shuffling in on Baer, taking an amazing beating through the early rounds, only to thrill the crowd with a rally that started with the fourth and continued on through the seventh as Baer seemed to stop, lead, and hide his time.

Baer was guilty of several fouls in the eighth, but the German who until Thursday night was considered the hardest-hitting heavyweight of the day, The Californian several times was warned for heaving and back-handing.

Schmeling's right brought blood to Baer's nose in the first round, but the Californian never was in real danger, although it seemed for a time he had punched himself out hammering the German through the first four rounds.

Schmeling Won Three

The Associated Press score card gave Schmeling only three rounds, the fourth on aggressiveness, the sixth on Baer's fouls, and the seventh through Baer's temporary lack of interest in the proceedings. Baer went back to work again in the eighth and hurried on to the ten-round conclusion.

COMPETING FOR WORLD'S HONORS IN EMPIRE GAMES

The biggest gathering of women athletes ever known is to take place in London, England, in 1934. Events for women are to be included in the British Empire games, which take place in August next year, and representatives of every part of the empire will attend.

The women's world games are being held in London in the same month, and it is to be hoped that most of the British athletes will stay for the international gathering. Mrs. Muriel A. Cornhill, secretary of the women's amateur athletic association, said recently: "We expect that from 20 to 25 nations will send women to the world games. Each will send a dozen representatives and more if they wish."

BRITAIN SPENDING MORE FOR ARMY, NAVY AND AIR

The 1933 Britain's navy budget is up 2,000,000 pounds sterling over last year, the army estimate is up nearly one and a half million pounds, and the air force estimates are up 250,000 pounds. Fifteen "capital" ships and sixteen new fast destroyers for aircraft.

FIRST SEAGOING DRYDOCK

Uncle Sam will shortly have the first sea-going drydock. It is to be 350 feet long, 60 feet wide, and 33 feet high from keel to top deck, sufficiently large to repair a destroyer. It will have a ship's bow, to allow easy towing, and have a hinged gate at the stern.

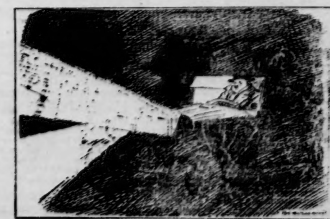

FAMOUS FLYING COUPLE ATTEND AIR DISPLAY

Almost on the eve of their flight across the Atlantic to New York in a last big bid for laurels, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Molison are shown interested in a display at the annual civil air display at Brooklands, England. Captain Molison and his wife, former Amy Johnson, expect to leave for New York as soon as the weather permits, and if the Atlantic hop is a success they will endeavor to set a long distance record on the return flight.
